PRIORITIES

"We look not at what can be seen... but at what cannot be seen."

II Corinthians 4:18a

We are faced with the task of determining those things in life that are of lasting value for us. We have to separate and distinguish between that which is passing and that which is eternal. We experience and encounter much each day that is misleading. We get our values all confused and pursue the temporary in lieu of the permanent. Seeking after material things captures most of our time. We so often count material things as the most important in life and lose our sense of the eternal.

We live in a culture that, generally speaking, has lost its belief in the invisible and believes, hopes, and works only in the visible. That which is infinite has been cast aside for that which is finite and conditional. We live as if we believe that if we cannot touch it or see it, it really does not have much value. A growing edge in our faith is to understand the true values of life, realizing that the spiritual dimensions of life are what nourish our spirits and give depth and meaning to our lives. Another growing edge for us is to pay closer attention to the dimensions of our day that are permanent, giving less of ourselves to that which is only temporary. May God give us grace to be able to distinguish between the two.
